

Margary Rogers, RPR, CRI
Washington, D.C.

Margary Rogers, an official court reporter in Washington, D.C., obtained her Bachelor of Science degree in Court Reporting, Associate of Science Degree as a Legal Assistant, and a Concentration in Psychology from Johnson & Wales University in Providence, R.I. An NCRA member for more than 20 years, Rogers regularly presents at NCRA and Maryland Court Reporters Association (MCRA) annual conferences and has written several articles for the JCR and NCRA student newsletter. She earned the Realtime Systems Administrator certificate.

As creator of POP (Promoting Our Profession) movement/initiatives, Rogers focuses on partnering and collaborating with organizations, communities, and schools to serve them by giving back while promoting and marketing the skill and career of stenography.

Rogers has been a director, secretary, president-elect, and president of MCRA. She taught court reporting at universities and community colleges in D.C., Maryland, and Virginia.

Rogers is a National Court Reporters Foundation (NCRF) Angel and Angel Gatherer. She chairs NCRA's Membership Committee and serves as a National Congress of State Associations (NCSA) delegate. She also serves on the Student/Teacher Committee, PAC Committee, and Brand Ambassador Council.

Diversity and inclusion are important to Rogers. She is the first recipient of the NCRF Carl Saucedo Grant.
